The plaintiff sought to show that, although Miner charged Taggart with being crazy when he was placed in the hospital, Taggart was taken out and placed in command of his company.

General Miner reiterated that he did General Miner reiterated that he did not confine Taggart for acute alcoholism, but for the purpose of observing his mental condition. General Miner asserted that he fully expected to see a reconciliation the last time he saw Mrs. Taggart. "As a peacemaker did you think it equid effect a reconciliation to send Mrs. Taggart away and have her take the children?" the general was asked. "I thought that if she went away she would be better able to quietly think the matter over and feel mor like a reconciliation," was the reply.

An exciting and expensive runaway occurred last evening in Ogden canyon when a livery team belonging to Blackham Bros. and driven by three employes of the Pullman company. raced down the canyon driveway and collided with a load of hay, much to the detriment of the livery riz. The occupants of the carriage were P. B. Smith. G. Dismdeks, V. Lightfoot, with some ladies. They were driving rabidly down the canyon when the team sot beyond their control and near the first bridge dashed into a load of hay, spilling out the Pullman employes and their ladies and badly injuring both horses and completely demolishing the buggy. At the livery stable the gentlemen of color put up $55 in cash with a note for $109 in liquidation for their fun.
